George Washington Birthday Association Plans Parade.

CONFEDERATE SONS ORGANIZE

Arranging to Establish a Local Camp—Home of White House Messenger Damaged by Fire—Mrs. Thomas Bayless Dies in Hospital, Respite for George Midgets.

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, (Bell Telephone 62.) 523 King Street.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 17.—The George Washington Birthday Association will hold its annual meeting to-morrow night, when the question of holding a parade on Washington's Birthday will come up for consideration. The annual election of officers will also take place at this meeting.

This association several years ago inaugurated a movement having for its object the celebrating, in a befitting way, of Washington's Birthday, and the general plan following has been a banquet and a parade on alternating years. This February happens to be the year for the parade. It is stated by those connected with the association that a committee will in all probability be appointed at to-morrow night's meeting to determine the feasibility of holding a parade. The committee will, no doubt, interview the business men of the city to secure their views in regard to the project.

Many of the members of the association regard it as an almost settled question that they will parade next February. It is stated that it is the intention of the association, in the event a parade is held, to have a big military pageant and also to invite the various fire companies in this city and throughout the State to participate. It is pointed out that it works a considerable hardship on merchants to get up suitable floats for such an occasion. Those, however, who desire to have floats in the procession, in the event of it being held, will be allowed to do so.

Final plans preparatory to organizing a camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans will be made by a committee of seven, recently appointed, at a meeting which will be held at 8 o'clock to-morrow night at Lee Camp Hall. It is expected that the committee in rendering its report will make public the names of speakers who are expected, will address a public meeting of Sons of Veterans, which will be held at some future date. Those fostering the movement already have a list containing names of several hundred who are eligible to membership in the proposed camp. It is expected that many will sign their names for entrance into the order following the proposed public meeting.

Mrs. Sallie Bayless, wife of Thomas Bayless, of Lincoln, Fairfax County, Va., died this afternoon at the Alexandria Hospital, following an operation. She was thirty-eight years old. Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons and two daughters. The remains were taken to her home at Alexandria. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Episcopal chapel at Lincoln, and the interment will be in the cemetery at that place.

Owing to the fact that Judge L. C. Bailey, of the Corporation Court of this city, will leave to-morrow for Harrisonburg, Rockingham County, Va., where he will preside at the Circuit Court in place of Judge Hass, George Midgets, alias William Johnson, colored, convicted of the murder of Charles T. Smith, will not be brought here to-morrow to be sentenced to be hanged. It is generally understood that the condemned man will be reconveyed from Frederickburg, where he is now confined, as soon as Judge Bailey concludes holding court at that place, which will perhaps be the latter part of this week. As previously stated, the Court of Appeals of the State recently dismissed the writ of error and supersedeas granted by them in Midgets' case.

The two-story frame dwelling situated at 808 Duke street and occupied by William B. Dulany, a colored messenger at the White House, was gutted by fire and water at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The entire fire department responded to the alarm. The fire was confined to the roof of the structure, and it proved rather stubborn for the fire ladders. A defective flue is said to have been responsible for the blaze. The damage to the house will be several hundred dollars, partially covered by insurance.

The west wall of the brick house occupied by Mrs. Rosa Leake, 84 Duke street, was scorched considerably by the fire. The house of Thomas Chumney, 808 Duke street, which is a frame structure, would have been burned had it not been for the prompt action of the firemen.

Announcement was made at St. Mary's Catholic Church this morning that Right Rev. Augustine Van de Vyver, Bishop of Virginia, will administer the sacrament of confirmation in that church Sunday, December 1, at the morning services. It is stated that a large class of adults and children will be confirmed.

"Temptation" was the subject of an address delivered this afternoon before a meeting for men, held in the lecture room of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, by Rev. P. P. Phillips, rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church. A solo was rendered by Mr. M. L. Dinwiddie.

The Alexandria Athletic Association's basketball team last night defeated a team representing Company G, First Regiment, District Militia, by a score of 21 to 15. Announcement is made that the local team will on Tuesday next play a game in its own hall with a picked team from the Second Regiment, District Militia.

An entertainment will be given next Thursday at the Young Men's Sodality Lyceum Hall by Prof. H. L. Hildebrandt, of Baltimore, for the benefit of the Baptist mission.

George R. Galtier Is Dead. Rockville, Md., Nov. 17.—George R. Galtier, a farmer, died at his home near Galtiersburg last evening of catarrh of the stomach and other troubles, aged fifty years. His wife, who was a Miss Graff, and several children survive him.

Business Suspended by Federation. Norfolk, Nov. 17.—Business was suspended to-day by the convention of the Federation of Labor, most of the delegates spending the day at Cape Henry, where an oyster roast was given them by local labor organizations. One hundred barrels of oysters were prepared for the feast.

FIRE ALARMS SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Panic Among Children Prevented by Cool Head of Superintendent.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Richmond, Va., Nov. 17.—Fire from the heating plant caused a panic among several hundred children in the Clay Street Methodist Church Sunday school this morning, and but for the cool head of the superintendent, serious consequences might have resulted. Standing in their midst, he urged them to go out quietly, and after the first rush there was little danger of accident.

The schoolroom was filled with smoke before the scholars realized that the building was on fire. In order to allay excitement a still alarm was turned in, to the fire department. The blaze was extinguished by means of chemicals. All of the scholars and teachers escaped without injury.

JAIL BREAKERS ARE FOILED

Washington County Turnkey Finds Hole Just in Time.

Thirteen Prisoners Had Cut Through Steel Barrier and Were About to Escape.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 17.—It developed to-day that a jail delivery at the Washington County Jail last night was once again averted. A discovery made by Turnkey after that a large hole, sufficient to admit a man's body, was being sawed through a steel sheet lining covering the ceiling of a room connected with one of the cells.

Another hour's work would have given the hole, which would have given the thirteen prisoners in that department access to the outer corridor, from which it would have been comparatively easy to escape by digging through a brick wall, which was done twice last summer by the Cynthol brothers.

A small steel saw was used to saw through the steel covering, which is one-quarter of an inch thick. Sheriff Delbert says he is at a loss to know how the prisoners got possession of the saw, as everyone of the thirteen had been carefully searched before being locked up.

OPPOSE SECTARIAN COLLEGE.

Lynchburg Folk Resent Proposed Change in Woman's Institution.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 17.—The people of Lynchburg are stirred by the developments at the Virginia Conference in Petersburg, which threaten a change in the relations of the Randolph-Macon Women's College to the conference.

The attempt to force the college into distinct denominational management and technical denominational control is regarded as a blow at its efficiency, and is certain to impair its great reputation and usefulness.

The college was founded by the people of Lynchburg without reference to religious persuasion, and is patronized by the people of all denominational beliefs. While it was fully understood that the Woman's College would be allied to the Randolph-Macon system, and would be managed mainly by the Methodists, it was quite as distinctly understood that there were to be no exclusive denominational ties, and the foundation fund was subscribed by persons of all faiths.

To now create a technical ownership relation to the Methodist Church would take the college off the Carnegie Foundation fund, and it is feared here, would deprive it of a large share of interdenominational patronage which it has always received.

Many of the leading Methodists of the town are in a state of indignation about the incident, and already a protest to the conference has been signed by Methodists who gave over $100,000 to the college. They are indignant, and are presented, and it is certain that the Methodists of Lynchburg, if it should become necessary, will contest the validity of the proposed action.

PASTOR IS TRANSFERRED.

Rev. S. K. Wine Preaches Farewell Sermon at Winchester.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Winchester, Va., Nov. 17.—Rev. S. K. Wine, who succeeded Rev. S. D. Skelton, now of Edinburg, Va., as pastor of Winchester United Brethren Church, preached his farewell sermon to-night and caused much surprise by announcing that the bishop had transferred him to Chambersburg, Pa.

Rev. George P. Hett, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., has been mentioned as his probable successor. Rev. Edgar A. Stanton, pastor of Frederick circuit at Stephens City, this county, of the same church, has just been transferred to Marysville, Md.

RICHMOND WOMAN SHOT.

Mrs. W. Brydon Tennant Accidentally Killed with Revolver.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Richmond, Va., Nov. 17.—Mrs. W. Brydon Tennant, formerly Miss Bruce Williams, one of the most prominent young society matrons in Richmond, met an accidental death in her home on Grace street this morning through the medium of a revolver.

Her husband, hearing the report from another portion of the house, rushed to her apartments, where he found her unconscious on the floor with a bullet in her head. She died almost immediately without having spoken a word.

Mrs. Tennant was a reigning belle up to the time of her marriage five years ago. She was regarded as a very beautiful woman. Her family is widely and prominently known throughout the State. She was related to the Davenports, who are said to be the most wealthy people in Virginia. Mrs. Tennant leaves one child.

Hagerstown, Nov. 17.—While Frederick Angle and Oscar Grooms, lads aged about ten years, were having a friendly tussle this afternoon, each trying to get possession of a loaded rifle, the weapon was accidentally discharged, the bullet passing through Angle's nose. ## TESTING THE BOYCOTT

Labor's Rights on Trial in Buck Stove Case.

WIDE INTEREST IN OUTCOME

Principle Involved in Suit Brought Under Sherman Antitrust Law of Far-reaching Importance to Both Capital and Union Labor Organizations—History of the Litigation.

With counsel on both sides admitting it is the most important capital-labor litigation since the Debs case, national interest has been attracted to the suit testing the labor boycott principle now pending in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The Buck Stove and Range Company, of St. Louis, is seeking, with the Sherman antitrust law as its weapon, to have the American Federation of Labor restrained from promoting a boycott against its products as a result of labor difficulties. While this is not the first time the Sherman law has been invoked against labor, it is the most notable instance in which a Federal court recently has been asked to decide that the long-standing practice of the Federation to concentrate the displeasure of its 1,700,000 affiliated and subordinate members upon an "unfair" firm is a restraint of commerce fully as much as that exercised by trusts which have been convicted under this statute.

The Buck company has applied for a temporary injunction, prohibiting, while the case is pending, the continuance of the boycott, which is declared to have irreparably injured the company's business since it was declared last May by the executive council of the Federation of Labor.

Points in the Contention.

Argument which is clearly bringing forth the vital issue at stake began last Thursday before Judge Ashley M. Gould in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and will be concluded probably on Thursday. On Friday last, James M. Beck, formerly Assistant Attorney General, who successfully prosecuted the Paper Trust under the Sherman law, made his argument for the exercise of that law against the alleged conspiracy with which the Federation is charged to be seeking the ruin of the company's business. To-day Mr. T. C. Spelling, of New York, counsel for the Federation, who represents it in the campaign to remove the operations of labor organizations from the restrictions of judicial injunctions will make argument for the defense in which he will uphold the right to boycott. The position of organized labor is that any effort through the courts to interfere with the exercise of boycotts by any means within labor's power is a violation of constitutional rights. Whatever the decision in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The case is the more notable because the Federation officials are said to be bitter against James V. Van Cleave, president of the Buck Stove and Range Company. Mr. Van Cleave is also now President of the National Association of Manufacturers. Organized labor has been exhorted to aid the defense of the suit on the ground that it was an attack from the Manufacturers' Association. As a matter of fact, however, it is claimed the Manufacturers' Association has nothing to do with the case.

Beginning of the Case.

The case began when James M. Beck, of New York; J. J. Davenport, of Washington, and Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Conn., counsel for the Buck Stove and Range Co., filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, late in the summer, a bill invoking the Sherman Anti-Trust law against the boycott. The bill set forth that the Buck Stove and Range Co., operated an open shop at St. Louis, but it employed several hundred union men with whom its relation are harmonious and satisfactory. Despite the fact, on August 28, 1906, the members of the Metal Polishers' International Union employed in the works struck and left their employment without waiting for the adjustment of their grievance, which it is claimed they should have done in pursuance of a standing agreement between their international union and a Stove Founders' National Defense Association, of which the Buck company is a member.

Declaring the Boycott.

As a result of this dispute, the bill declares, the American Federation of Labor was asked to and did declare a boycott against the Buck company and has promoted this boycott by every means within its power. The Federation is the supreme authority of 120 national or international unions, 27,000 locals, 26 State federations, and 539 central labor unions, representing a total membership of more than 1,700,000 union working men. At the national convention of the Federation in Minneapolis in November, 1906, a resolution was introduced by George Bechtold, delegate from the International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees, stating that the Buck Stove and Range Co. dismissed every member of that brotherhood in its employ as soon as it became known he was a member. The resolution provided that the product of the Buck company be placed on the "We don't patronize" list. The convention committee on boycotts, composed largely of delegates from St. Louis, favorably reported the resolution for consideration by the executive council of the Federation. At its meeting in Washington in March, 1907, the executive council declared the company unfair and placed its name on the "We don't patronize" list. It has been published in that list in the American Federationist ever since. While the prescribed practice of the Federation calls for mediation and an attempt at amicable settlement by the Federation, the company declares that this was never resorted to.

Damage Done to Business. Since that time the Buck company complains that its business has been irreparably injured by the activities of members of the affiliated unions in boycotting its stoves and ranges. The relief sought by the Buck Stove and Range Company is an injunction perpetually restraining or enjoining the Federation of Labor, its officers, and members, and all others concerned, from in any manner carrying on a conspiracy to "restrain and destroy the business" of the company, from conspiring to prevent the company from carrying on its business, from agreeing or combining to injure, destroy, or interfere with the company's business or sale of its products by itself or any one else.

Effect of the Boycott.

Mr. Davenport, of counsel for the company, who has represented before Congress large industrial interests which feel themselves threatened by the radical anti-injunction legislation sought from Congress by the Federation, reviewed the activities which the Buck Stove and Range Company submitted to show the havoc wrought with its business by the boycott. The first argument of the application for temporary injunction was made by Mr. Beck, who declared that the boycott was the principal weapon of the American Federation of Labor in forcing compliance with its demands and the demands of the organizations affiliated with and subordinate to it. The appearance of the name of any person or firm on the "We don't patronize" list, he declared, was the signal for the institution of a boycott, and that every official, organizer, or other agent of the Federation or the affiliated unions knew immediately what to do in the way of so injuring the business of the "unfair" concern, that to save itself from ruin it would accede to an agreement with whatever union it was in dispute on terms acceptable to that union. The executive council, with its power to declare boycotts, Mr. Beck said, was practically a court of last resort, with Samuel Gompers as its chief justice, while the word "unfair" was its verdict, and the "We don't patronize" list its writ of execution.

Quotes from Federationist.

Mr. Beck invited the attention of the court to what he declared was a direct attack upon its dignity and power. He read from a copy of the American Federationist for October (since the suit was filed) an editorial paragraph which he declared was a notice that the possible disappearance of the name of the Buck Stove and Range Company from the "We don't patronize" list should not be accepted as meaning that the boycott had been declared off, but that even if the name did cease to appear, the boycott should continue.

Line of Defense.

Mr. T. C. Spelling, of counsel for the defense, is the author of standard works on injunctions. He will be in charge of the arguments before Congress in behalf of the anti-injunction legislation sought by the Federation. Also representing the defense are Ralston & Siddons, of this city.

KNOWN AS GAME MAN

McLaughlin's Tragic End a Shock to Friends Here.

CALIFORNIAN A GOOD LOSER

Too Much of a Sport to Kill Himself Through Fear of Bankruptcy, Is the Opinion of Commissioner Lane, Who Knew Western Mining Man and Politician for Many Years.

"Frank McLaughlin was the last man in the world I would have suspected of committing suicide," said Franklin K. Lane, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, from California, last night, commenting on the death of the noted Californian, who first shot his daughter and then took poison, in his Santa Cruz home Saturday. Mr. Lane had known McLaughlin for many years, and last night gave it as his belief that there could be nothing in the story that fear of bankruptcy had driven him to end his life. He also paid high tribute to the memory of the dead man.

"Frank McLaughlin was one of the finest fellows in the world," said Mr. Lane, "and one that would go to an extremity for a friend. His disposition was remarkable, and I doubt if there are many men in the world who have done as many men good as he did during his life. Willing to take his chance, he would bet $10,000 on a prize fight or a horse race, and eat his dinner with just as much enjoyment if he lost as if he won. He was a sport, in that sense, he had a loud voice and a loud laugh, he was a big man, and a Westerner, but there was nothing of vulgarity in him, and he was as clean a man morally as ever was."

Once Republican State Chairman.

He was chairman of the Republican State organization at the time of McKinley's first inauguration, and was at one time prominently talked of for the United States Senatorship and for the governorship, but he was not in politics for office. "He only considered it his duty to come from San Francisco to Washington to aid a friend who wanted a postmaster'ship or a marshalship, and when he came here, he was a noticeable figure about the hotels. Large, he wore glasses, and a wide-rimmed hat that overspread his broad shoulders, and looked as though he might own a big cattle ranch, or a mine, or a gambling place, or was a new United States Senator from the West."

"It is because he cared so little for money—no one could tell from the way he spent it whether he had only a thousand or a million dollars—that I cannot believe financial troubles caused him to kill himself. Even if his affairs were ruined, if he was in the hole, it is hard to believe a man with his disposition would seek death rather than a new fortune."

Generous to a Fault.

"If he kept any accounts, and it is quite unlikely, I would not be surprised but that it would be found there are thousands of men indebted to Frank McLaughlin in sums ranging from $10 to $10,000, and so long as he had it, friends could always get more. He made his money in placer mining about Sacramento, and was reputed to be wealthy, although, as I have said, no one could tell whether he had much or little, for he always spent it lavishly."

BREAKS OUT OF NEW JAIL.

Reckless Driver Hurts Pride of Citizens by Leaving Calaboose.

Pacheco, Long Island, Nov. 17.—Frank Decarlo, through his escape from the brand-new village lock-up here last night, has perpetrated an immense joke upon the local authorities, who are being bantered by the villagers in consequence. The jail had just been completed, at a cost of $1,800, and was considered capable of holding any ordinary prisoner. Decarlo, who was arrested last night for reckless driving and placed in the lock-up, was not destined to remain in confinement. He climbed to a small window, opened it above the floor, and quickly cut his way through to freedom.

MARLBOROUGH FOR MAYOR.

Like the Duchess, the Duke Is Becoming More Serious Minded.

London, Nov. 17.—The Duke of Marlborough has consented to become Mayor of Woodstock, the ancient borough which adjoins Blenheim. He thrust away this honor when it was offered to him before.

It would seem that their martial unhappiness has sobered the minds of both the Duke and the Duchess, and has emphasized to them that there are such things as suffering and misery in this world.

News comes that the Duchess of Marlborough is studying the prison system and the treatment of arriving immigrants in New York. The Duke, too, is displaying marked interest in public and philanthropic undertakings.

To the surprise of the whole country-side, he entertained the school children of the Salvation Army at Blenheim recently, exhibited to the little ones the castle's historic possessions and gave them cakes and coins.

The Duke is hunting very little this year, and altogether is becoming an eminently serious person. His two sons, Lord Blandford and Lord Ivor Churchill, are at Blenheim, having not yet been sent to school at Rottingdean.
